SOCIETY NEWS AND NOTES

Recent Meetings

On January 22 the meeting was held at the Library of the Church of Latter Day Saints, 914 Hill Street, Ann Arbor. Kathy Bailey and several others explained how to gain access to the vast amount of material available on microfilm and microfiche at the new library. The International Genealogical Index (IGI) contains birth and marriage dates submitted by LDS members, and other records extracted from certain church and civil records of the United States and many other countries. These are on microfiche and are filed alphabetically within the states, shires, parishes and so on. There is also a microfilm copy of the card catalog of the material at the Genealogical Library at Salt Lake City, available to everyone.

At the February meeting Arnold Pilling from Wayne State University spoke on dating old photographs by several methods, such as by the mounts, by the costumes or artifacts in the photo, or by the different photographic processes. He also talked about the preservation of old photographs by using archival materials and by keeping them in a cool dry dark place such as the top shelf of a closet.

At the meeting on March 25 Joe Oldenburg, manuscript curator of the Burton Collections at the Detroit Public Library, talked about how to use the collections. The Burton Collections began as the private library of Clarence M. Burton, who specialized in Detroit and Michigan material, and it has expanded to include a great deal of material from other parts of the United States, Canada, Great Britain, and some from other countries. Oldenburg, with the use of a handout map of the library, explained how to find the material in the library. In the reading room on open shelves are state and county histories, and family histories are on shelves along the walls, as are census indexes. Finding other material must be done by means of the card catalogs, which are set up in categories; the main dictionary file, and other files on special subjects such as Detroit and Michigan history, pictures of Detroit, Great Lakes ships and shipwrecks, atlases and maps, a Detroit chronology, a genealogical index, vital records, military service lists from the Colonial Wars through the Spanish American War, and the family charts of the Detroit Society for Genealogical Research. There is also a complete collection of census microfilms, with Soundex indexes for Michigan only.

This is a major collection and one of our principal research sources, and this talk was of considerable benefit to all of us who use it.

On April 14 several members of the German Interest Group went to Wayne State University to hear Pastor Frederick C. Weiser from the Pennsylvania German Society speak on Pennsylvania Germans and other German groups who have come to this country, and how to identify them.

SUMMER RESEARCH - 1983

By Peggy Allen Brann

August 14, 1983 commenced a rewarding experience of genealogical research for me in areas of New York and New Jersey. In Romulus, Seneca Co., N.Y. I located the graves of my 3x great grandparents, Silas and Esther (GARDNER) ALLEN,* formerly of Morristown (Green Village), Morris Co., N.J., as well as eleven other members of this family. Because it was Sunday and the courthouse was closed, I headed for New Brunswick, N.J. and Rutgers University, the repository for the Genealogical Society of New Jersey. After two days of research at Rutgers I had located, among other things, a two volume genealogy on one line of my ancestors, Francis LINDSLEY and His Descendants of the Colony of Connecticut dating from 1639.

By mid-week I was perusing a wonderfull collection at the Joint Free Library in Morristown, N.J., home of Revolutionary War period ancestors Gilbert and Elizabeth (LINDSLEY) ALLEN. Due to a remark by an extremely helpful librarian about a local retired attorney, I raced to the courthouse thirty minutes before closing time and was incredibly lucky to locate an elderly man who gruffly demanded to know "who" I was looking for in the typically overwhelming aisles of large vital records volumes. When I answered with my 4x great grandfather's name, he replied, "I know Gilbert Allen. What do you want with him?," just as if he was very much alive and well. I said I was incredibly lucky to have stumbled into this gentleman for he is a member of the Morris County Heritage Commission in charge of classifying, refurbishing, indexing, microfilming and storing old county records, and is also trustee emeritus of the Genealogical Society of New Jersey. In corresponding with him over the next several months, he provided me with detailed histories of three families critical to my compilations, Gilbert ALLEN, Henry GARDNER, and Jeptha WADE; with the added bonus of description and location of land owned by Gilbert Allen plotted from deeds by this same gentleman.

Orange, N.J. is about a 30 minute drive from Morristown. Here the Old Burying Ground is beautifully maintained surrounding the Presbyterian Church which was built in 1928. Hundreds of remarkably preserved red slate tombstones date from the early 1700s. Although most of the stones are very legible, I was unable to locate the grave of ancestor Ebenezer LINDSLEY who died in 1743, but his name does appear in the records as having been buried there. When the present church was built, some gravestones had to be removed and it is possible that his was among these.

Because I had experienced such good luck in uncovering a great deal of information in New Jersey, I decided to return to Michigan via Seneca Co., New York and peruse the courthouse records there. I have been grateful for that decision ever since.

A few years earlier I had corresponded with Betty Auten, historian for Seneca Co., but was never prepared for what I found in her collections. Betty has accumulated literally thousands and thousands of names and histories on 3x5 cards, and has innumerable cartons filled with bits and pieces of information relative to the county and its inhabitants, so precious to genealogists. Our initial discussion lasted two hours and I returned that evening for another three hours of research which Betty herself enthusiastically led. She helped me find information on another of my Revolutionary War ancestors, William and Margaret (MC AFEE) WADDELL of Lodi, N.Y. She then suggested that I talk to Wayne Morrison of Lodi, printer and genealogist.

*Parents of Gilbert Allen who moved to Lodi Twp., Washt. Co. in 1836.

The next morning I drove to the charming old town of Lodi and felt I was in a village where time has stood still for 75 years. I located the W. E. Morrison Printing Office high on a hill in a pillared white antebellum-style house where Mr. Morrison has his 19th century print shop. Talking to this interesting man for three hours passed quickly, and I left loaded down with reproductions of county histories and atlases and my head was buzzing with many new directions and clues to pursue. Of particular interest to me was the information I had uncovered on the Jeptha WADE family. Jeptha Wade was a surveyor of roads in New York and his youngest son Jeptha Homer Wade was one of the founders of the American commercial telegraph system and third president of Western Union Telegraph Company. A historic marker denotes the birthplace of Jeptha H. Wade on Highway 414 in Seneca Co. which his father had surveyed very early in the 1800s. Mr. Morrison also showed me a picture of a house built in the early 1800s by my ancestor Peter Allen. Later in the day I visited that home and found it still occupied and well maintained.

Mr. Morrison suggested that I pay a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Brown, town and village historians of Lodi. He very kindly made the appointment for me that same afternoon, and when I arrived I was welcomed into their home with enthusiasm for the research I was engaged in. But I could not have anticipated the genuine hospitality of the Browns. After some conversation, I was invited to stay for lunch which included fresh vegetables from their garden. Later they insisted on driving me on a tour of the township which overlooks beautiful Lake Seneca, one of the Finger Lakes of New York. Then came still another reward when we finally stopped at the Old Lodi Cemetery. There amidst brush and weeds were the graves of my 4x great grandparents, William and Margaret (MC AFEE) WADDELL, ancestors for whom I had been searching quite some time. One of the tombstones was broken off at ground level and had been respectfully placed against a large oak tree earlier by Mr. Brown, who is also custodian of the Lodi cemeteries. One stone was broken into three sections. I inquired about having these repaired and Mr. Brown said he would see to it himself. Only a few weeks later I received a modest invoice for the materials and labor, along with a few photos of the stones in a repaired state. The pictures also showed the family plot freshly mowed and cleared of brush.

In just six days I had acquired enough new information to keep me busy cross-checking and filing until next summer when, hopefully, another journey into the past takes me searching for members of the John VAN DUYNE family in Trumansburg, Tompkins Co., N.Y. To those readers who have not yet ventured forth to personally conduct research, I can heartily recommend doing so. Not only is it exciting and adventuresome, but is is a very personally satisfying experience to stand beside the very ground where your ancestors rest. And if you're lucky, you'll meet some wonderful new friends who share your interest and concern for family history preservation.

SOME EARLY TAVERN PERMITS OF WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN TERRITORY

The following list is prepared from a collection of original tavern permits found in early Washtenaw County records held at MHC, Bentley Historical Library, Ann Arbor. The last entry however, is copied from a document held by the Pittsfield Township office. Tavern permits, issued by township officers, were good for one year only. The fee mentioned for the permit issued to Rufus McCraken was $100.00; McCraken paid fifty dollars and Josiah Snow and James Bougham each paid twenty-five dollars. Other permits made no mention of fees.

PRINCE BENNETT, 1780-1841

Researched by Roger Brooks

Prince Bennett, born in Dutchess County, New York on January 29, 1780, was an early Augusta Township pioneer. His parents, Prince Bennett (d. ca. 1812) and Phebe Mosier were active Quakers who migrated with their family to Otsego County, New York when he was a young man. There he married Esther McCloud (b. Cheshire County, New Hampshire, October 2, 1783) on April 3, 1804. They reared seven children, all born in Otsego County: Ruth (1805-1852), Lucy (1811-1892), Stephen (1813-1859), Prince (1815-1878?), Joseph (1817-1899), Mary (1820-1892), and George (1821-1896). Together, they moved to Augusta Township in September 1831. Clearing heavily timbered land, they established a 240 acre farm straddling Sections 2 and 3, and erected the first frame house in Augusta Township in 1836. Prince, Jr. became active in community affairs and held several township offices, including that of supervisor and justice of the peace. He was also active in the anti-slavery movement. Prince Bennett, Sr. died in Augusta Township on October 4, 1841; Esther died on April 10, 1863.

JOHN B. HARRIS DESCRIBES HOW LUMBER WAS PREPARED

[The following article appeared in The Ypsilanti Press, 27 January 1938 (page 2). Mr. Harris (1872-1951) lived in Augusta Township during his youth and attended Island School. A graduate of the Normal School in 1899 with a life-time teaching certificate, he taught in Belleville, Wayne County, Michigan before retiring to Ypsilanti.

FHC is indebted to the staff of the Ypsilanti Historical Archives for bringing this article to our attention.]

How Lumber Was Prepared

The recent moving of the house on the south east corner of Michigan Ave. and Hamilton Street, the Dr. F.B. Williamson home, has awakened in the mind of one of Ypsilanti's older citizens memories of his boyhood which was passed in this vicinity. At that time miles upon miles of virgin timber existed in this section - timber that has long since given place to fruitful cultivated farms. Although he did not share the labors and privations of the earliest pioneers, as a boy John B. Harris, knew intimately many elderly men and women who were first settlers and learned from them many things now little known. Though Mr. Harris disclaims any ability as an author he has drawn on his accurate memory for this story of historical interest:

Few people of our time can realize the tremendous amount of labor entailed in the construction of our early frame houses. At first all lumber was whip sawed. This was done in the following manner. The tree to furnish the lumber was selected and felled and the logs cut there from. The log was flattened on one side with a broad axe then elevated by blocks of six feet or more, the flat side being placed uppermost. Two men using a saw similar to our crosscuts, one standing on the log, the other standing underneath slowly sliced the log into planks or boards. After being piled and dried this lumber was then planed smooth by heavy jack planes operated by hand. Imagine the labor involved in producing the lumber necessary to build even a modest dwelling by this method. Yet this was done by our grandsires and without doubt there are many dwellings yet standing in this vicinity in which whipsawed lumber was used. In this connection may I say that I believe the house owned by Mark Lathers of Stony Creek to be one of these.

This vicinity was settled largely by New Englanders and your New Englander is remarkable for his ingenuity. His native hills and valleys abounded with power which he early harnessed to saws to relieve him of the slow and arduous task of whip sawing. The swift streams of his native hills afforded him abundant opportunity to plan and build mills of various kinds. What could be more natural on his arrival here than to look about for a mill site. The more level contour of the country and the sluggish streams contrasted sharply with the old home; but where ever opportunity offered, a mill was erected.

On the creeks south of Ypsilanti four of these mills were early in operation. Few people realize this including many adults born and raised in close proximity to the sites of these now almost forgotten mills.

Perhaps the first of these mills was built by Lyman Graves emigrant from Massachusetts on Section 27 in Ypsilanti Township. The site was high up on the west bank of Paint Creek in a field near the present residence of William Kelly. Its exact location can be pointed out by Lewis Moore of Textile Road, who learned it from the late B.D. Kelly. The old mill race can be traced along the west bank of the creek for three quarters of a mile or more. The exact location of the dam on the creek has probably been lost. The mill was built perhaps as early as 1830 and was operated until sometime subsequent to the Civil War, according to the testimony of the late Harvey Day who clearly remembered visits there as a boy. Many thousands of feet of lumber were sawed by it. Old saws and boards are still found in the buildings thereabouts showing the old stub shot mark of the jig. It is said that the lumber used in the construction of the farm home of William Kelly was almost entirely sawed in this old mill.

In Augusta Township

Three of the four mills mentioned were located in the southern half of Augusta Township. The first of these to be erected was built on the southeast quarter of section 34 very shortly after theGraves Mill by one Hardy known to everyone in that vicinity as "Old Cap". Its location was on Paint Creek less than one-half mile from Oakville. Because of the larger volume of water at this site, this mill probably operated more steadily and produced more lumber than any of the others. Its product was often drawn by oxen to the Village of Brest near the point where Stony Creek empties into Lake Erie. It has been said that at first a small run of stones enabled the owner to grind cornmeal, etc; however, this is disputed and, though it may be true, I doubt it. The old dam race, etc. could still be traced a few years ago and presumably can still be seen. It was opereated until some time subsequent to the Civil War and in many old buildings in that vicinity its product may still be seen.[1]

The third of these mills was located on Paint Creek just up stream from where the creek crosses the highway between Sections 22 and 27. Built by Peter Tyler, an early settler and a son-in-law of Old Cap. Hardy, this mill like the others contributed powerfully to the life of the community. My father worked for Mr. Tyler in the winter of 1847-48 and summer following. His work was pretty much in the mill which ran twenty-four hours a day nearly all the time. Two shifts were worked, father's being the one from midnight to noon. One man did all the work, rolled the log on the carriage, set the log, operated the saw and carried out the lumber. The timbers of the old mill's foundation, the old race and the dam were clearly visible forty years ago, but little if any sign of it remains now. People living close to its site know nothing of its existence. Its last operator was Oramel Holt, grandfather of O.E. Vedder of Whittaker who states that the mill ran until sometime after the Civil War.

The last of these mills was built by Oscar Welsh,[2] grandfather of J.H. Welsh of the Stony Creek road. Mr. Welsh came here from Orange County, N.Y. about 1830 and located first on land in Pittsfield Township now owned by

1. Ed note: B. Hubbard's map of 1840 shows the southern half of the township to be marshes with islands of heavy timber. An even larger marsh in sections 16, 17, 18, 20 is labeled "Bear Swamp."

2. Ed note: Oscar Welch of Monroe Co., Michigan bought 40 acres from the U.S. on 4 October 1833.

Chester Bissell. In 1835 he sold this holding and located in the south part of Augusta where he died in 1838. After he moved to Augusta Township he built a mill and dam on Stony Creek up stream from the highway between Sections 28 and 33. To whom the mill passed when Mr. Welsh died, I have not learned nor by whom subsequently operated.[3] But its last operations were conducted by George Moffat and John Rose during the Civil War. According to Horace Moffat, son of George, who now lives in Milan, there was always difficulty about water rights etc. Finally the dam was cut by some neighbors who thought the pond was a breeding place for ague. Perhaps the operators did not own the mill, perhaps they found it unprofitable - at any rate they gave up the place and directed their energies elsewhere. The remains of the old dam are clearly seen from the highway.

All of these mills were very much the same, small and crude, consisting of an upright saw sometimes called a jig saw. By taking advantage of high water they were operated very much of the time; and thus, though the work was slow, contributed very powerfully to the upbuilding of their several communities. It should be remembered that the forests with their centuries of accumulation of leaves and fallen timber formed vast reservoirs of water which was slowly given up. In this way the forests unwittingly contributed to their own ruin and destruction.

The incident that brought about these recollections can be recited as follows. I have said that my father worked in the old Tyler mill ninety years ago. Many years afterwards the Tyler family moved to Ypsilanti and lived for sometime on Chidester St. In 1899 David Tyler son of Peter Tyler began the erection of the Dr. Williamson home. One day talking to my father I heard him say: "there's lumber going into that house that you sawed for my father over fifty years ago. You know father always kept the very best boards and carefully cured and piled them. When they were fully seasoned he piled them in the old barn and every year he repiled them to prevent rot and waste. When we moved to town we drew several thousand feet of this lumber with us and it has since been piled in the old barn on Chidester St. Father never would sell a stick of it; but I shall use it in the new house."

[3] Ed note: Pettibone's map of 1843 shows all of these mills. The Welch mill is listed as Wyne's. A Daniel E. Wines appears on the 1844 Poll List as well as the 1845 census in Augusta Township. In 1850 he is in Ann Arbor Township.

THE LODI PLAINS ACADEMY

By Martha Carr

The Lodi Plains Academy was begun in 1847 by the Rev. Rufus Nutting, a Presbyterian minister. Previously, Rev. Nutting had been principal of the Romeo Branch of the University of Michigan from 1842-1846. When the University withdrew funds from its branches, Nutting decided to open his own school. The school was located on the east side of Saline Road south of Textile Road in Lodi Township.

This Academy, sometimes called the Nutting Academy, was established before there were any high schools in the area. Its purpose was to prepare male students for study at the college level, chiefly the University of Michigan (before women were admitted to the UM), and to prepare both male and female students for teaching.

The information we have about the Lodi Academy comes from two school catalogues which have survived (1849-1850, 1852-1853), letters from former students published in Detroit newspapers in 1896-1897, and letters to the area historical society from a grandson of Rev. Nutting, E.P. Nutting. Much of this material is found in the Michigan Historical Collections, Bentley Historical Library, The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI.

The school itself was a wooden frame building with classrooms and offices on the first floor, a large assembly hall on the second floor, and a girls' dormitory on the third floor. According to the 1852-1853 catalogue, board could be obtained "in good families" for $1.50 to $1.75 a week, although many students did chores to help pay for their keep. The Federal Census of 1850 for Lodi Township, taken in late August, reveals the names of some of the farmers who boarded students as well as some of the students.

A paragraph from this same catalogue describes the location of the Academy. "The situation is distinguished for its moral and physical salubrity; and, although sufficiently retired, easily accessible on the stage-road from Monroe to Ann Arbor, and within about six miles of the depot of the Central Rail Road, in the last named city, which is connected with the Plains by a plank road."

Nutting himself was regarded as accomplished in languages but weak in mathematics. The teachers at his school included his wife, daughter, and son. Courses offered fell into two categories: English and classical or college preparatory which included Latin, Greek, French, and mathematics. Attendance at area religious services was required. In the early 1850s enrollment figures fell between one and two hundred students who came from southeastern Michigan, Ohio, New York, Illinois, and Wisconsin. Tuition at this time ranged from $9-$15 per year depending on the course of study chosen.

When Rev. Nutting retired, a Mr. Patchin took charge of the academy until it closed in 1864. During its existence, the Lodi Plains Academy was regarded as one of the best preparatory schools in Michigan.

The lists following are the names of students from the two surviving catalogues and a list of students of 1851/52 which appeared in an (unnamed) newspaper clipping of 1924.

FRIENDS CHURCH OF YPSILANTI

By N. H. Krohn

The Friends Church of Ypsilanti (now named Evangelical Friends Church) had its origins in what is now Augusta Township. It was in 1835 that the Adrian Meeting granted a request "from some of our Friends in Ypsilanti" to hold a meeting of worship on the First Days at the home of Prince Bennett. The old log house near Willis and Tuttle Hill Roads was one of the first Quaker homes in this area. Most of the early worship meetings were held there and later in the Bennett's new, frame house built in 1836.[1]

By 1841 a meeting house had been built on the present site near Bemis and Tuttle Hill Roads in Ypsilanti Township. The original frame church is now used as a social activity center by the congregation.

The faithful were granted permission in 1855 to hold their own Monthly Meetings. Job Gorton was appointed the first minister in 1857, although he had served as pastor from the beginning. Early Friends did not believe in hiring ministers. Mr. Gorton, known to all as "Uncle Job", was an outstanding figure in the community and served his church for over forty years with very little compensation.

The booklet prepared for the 100th anniversary celebration[2] listed the following as charter members on the 2nd day, 11th month, 1855:
